Collection Description

Biographical/historical note

The 31st National Republican Convention was held August 16-19, 1976, in Kansas City, Missouri. The delegates and party officials met in Kemper Arena which had just opened in 1974. The arena was adorned with red, white, and blue decorations as delegates decided if President Gerald Ford or California Governor Ronald Reagan would be their presidential candidate.

The pardon of former Republican President Richard Nixon by Gerald Ford was still a fresh, divisive issue among those attending the gathering. The struggle between the moderates and those leaning more toward the right of the party was resolved when Ford and running mate Bob Dole were selected to run against Democrats Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale in November of 1976.

Ody J. Fish was the convention manager; Mary Louise Smith was Chairman of the Republican National Committee; Bob Dole was temporary chairman of the convention and John Rhodes was the permanent chairman.

Scope and content note

This collection appears to have been assembled by the staff of the Missouri Valley Room around the time of the convention. Apparently various sources were contacted and asked to contribute artifacts and published items. An inventory of material collected was made and is in the collection folder. At the time of processing, nine items listed on the initial 1976 inventory were found missing. These included a broom, some placards, a plastic horn, a frisbee, and drinking glasses.
The collection includes newspapers and newspaper clippings, artifacts, brochures, invitations, flyers, pamphlets, guides, maps, bumper stickers, postal cancellations, convention publications, charts, notebooks, manuals, badges, tickets, pennants, placards, and other miscellaneous items.

The items included help to show the temperament of the convention and the issues pertaining to the event as well as some of the basic elements needed to stage a national political convention.
