Administrative Information

Custodial History: There was also a book collection of over 2,000 titles donated to the library in 1958. This collection consists primarily of arithmetic books which were acquired by Mr. Greenwood over his life time. These have been included in the classed book holdings of the department.

Related Collections: James Mickelborough Greenwood Papers, 1874-1914, (G1), Pickler Memorial Library, Truman State University, Kirksville, Missouri, copy of finding aid in collection folder.

Biographical/Historical Sketch

James Mickelborough Greenwood was born in Sangamon County, Illinois, on November 15, 1837. He was the son of Edmund and Jeannette Foster Greenwood. He was raised on a farm and at an early age developed an interest in mathematics. The family moved to Adair County, Missouri and James taught his first school at the age of 16 in that county. He attended Methodist Seminary in Canton, Missouri and eventually married Amanda McDaniel in 1859, a teacher in Kirksville, Missouri. They had three children.
During the Civil War Greenwood enlisted in the Missouri militia, serving from 1861-1864. After the war until he came to Kansas City in 1874, he taught at various schools including the Kirksville Normal School. He was offered the job of superintendent of the Kansas City School District from among 16 candidates, serving in that position from 1874 until 1913. He became an advisor to the School Board and served as such until he died at his desk in the Kansas City Public Library/Board of Education building at 9th and Locust on August 1, 1914.

James Greenwood was superintendent of the Kansas City School District during a period of rapid growth for the city and as a consequence for the school district too. During his tenure in Kansas City, he was much admired and respected and the schools attained a national as well as international reputation. Professor Greenwood was widely considered a distinguished, progressive educator who was known for introducing many new, and for his day, modern ideas. He was interested in his teachers, the curriculum, and the students. He would probably have referred to himself as a mathematician and was interested in the subject all of his life. He wrote books and articles on the topic, lectured on it, and pursued and nurtured those talented in the field. He was also fond of playing checkers and chess.

Greenwood held many honors and extra professional positions. He was elected President of the Missouri State Teacher’s Association in 1875-76 and again in 1906. He served as treasurer of the National Education Association for several years during the 1890s as well as President of the organization in 1898 and later as a lifetime member of its Board of Trustees. Greenwood traveled widely lecturing and he wrote numerous professional articles. He had published several educational books as well as mathematics books. Some of the more well known titles includes a revision of Ray’s Higher Arithmetic, Principles of Education Practically Applied, and History of American Arithmetics. In 1897, the curators of the University of Missouri conferred a Doctor of Laws degree to him. He traveled in Europe with national education officials to observe the progress of education in some of the principal European countries. After his wife died, he married Josephine Heermans, at that time principal of Whittier School.

According to newspaper accounts of his funeral, the following quotations represent how he was perceived by friends and peers: (Kansas City Journal, Aug. 2, 1914)

“Professor Greenwood was the most noble, worthy and versatile superintendent in the United States…He was head and shoulders above anyone else” – Horace Williams

“He had a most remarkable memory. Nothing was every forgotten. His mind was so full that you never felt that his sources were being exhausted. He was a thrilling speaker and when he was in action he swayed his audience with his irresistible power.” – Horace Williams

“Consider the local school system as a whole-it is his work” – Judge W. T. Bland

[Information for the biographical account was obtained from newspaper clippings found in the department’s mounted newspaper clipping collection]

Scope and Content Note

This collection of papers can be divided into the following groups: correspondence primarily written to Greenwood (Folders 1-4); a small amount of correspondence written by Greenwood as well as other personal and miscellaneous items (Folder 5); reports and speeches (Folders 6-9); an unpublished manuscript on the history of Missouri (Folders 9-17); and journals. The dates of the items range primarily from the 1890s up to Greenwood's death that covers more of the middle to late period of his school superintendence.

Within the collection are some published items, but the bulk of the collection is handwritten and typewritten items. The correspondence includes personal congratulatory letters. Of special interest in this category is responses received by Greenwood concerning a request he sent to the schools asking them how he and other school officials could be helpful to teachers in visiting them. These included 43 elementary school responses. There is some correspondence from Josephine Heermans as well as items of interest dated after his death.

Miscellaneous items include Greenwood Club yearbooks, published catalogs, receipts, newspaper clippings, outlines, papers and other correspondence, etc. The papers are typewritten and deal with educational related subjects. Correspondence written by Greenwood found in this category was written in 1908-1909.

The reports and speeches include primarily education related subjects as well as mathematics and reports to the Board of Education. Included is a short two-page handwritten sketch of the Kansas City schools apparently written after Greenwood's death. Of local interest is Colonel Van Horn's address on acceptance nomination for Congress, Sept. 10, 1902. Many of the speeches/reports are in outline form and some are identified as being written by others than Greenwood.

A large part of this collection is a manuscript on the history of Missouri entitled "The History of Missouri." Newspaper clippings following Greenwood's death mention this manuscript and that it had been sent to the printer. However, it is doubtful that it was ever published. It contains forty-one chapters both handwritten and typewritten with some editing included. This manuscript contains histories typical of the day including the state's early history, river history, history on the banks, churches, education, noted Missourians, etc.

The last part of the collection contains two journals and one notepad/journal. The two journals are dated 1910 and 1914 and appear to have been written by James Greenwood. They follow the school year, September to May with no entries during the summer months. Visits to various schools are noted including remarks on teachers. The notepad journal does not seem to have been Greenwood's, but it appears to have been kept by Josephine Heermans Greenwood, the second wife of Greenwood.

Because all three components of this collection series are so inter-related, it is important to look at each separately and as a whole to gain an understanding of those involved. The James M. Greenwood Papers present a brief glimpse into the busy and dedicated life of a local early educator. The newspaper clipping files, that are a part of Special Collections, are beneficial to consult when studying this man as they contain numerous entries for him. The department also has twenty items classed in the collection that he wrote including his math related publications. There are numerous entries in the Local History Database and some of these entries include citations to articles published by him in national magazines. The Kansas City School Board minutes (SC 23) are also available on microfilm and cover the years when Greenwood was superintendent. Portraits of him may also be found in the department's photograph collection.

Arranged by record type. Part of the Greenwood Collection Series which includes SC86-1, SC86-2, SC86-3.
